1. The electrical industry in Rumania is considered to be one of the most backward branches of Rumanian economy. Larger sums of money have been invested in the erection of electric power stations than for general improvements in the electrical industry. The electrical industry is short of raw materials such as wire and insulation equipment. The quality of products is lower than that of all other countries and the cost of production in general is higher.
2. Two enterprises devoted to the production of electrical material are Electro Putere, located in Stalin (Brasov) and Electro Precizia, situated in Timisoara. These enterprises are composed of most of the existing smaller electrical enterprises such as workshops and small factories producing electrical equipment.
3. The Electro Putere enterprises produce small electric motors of 5 horsepower, automatic switch gears, measuring instruments, insulators and other small equipment. Electro Precizia includes the Siemens and A.E.G. factories which were taken over [REDACTED] and were expanded after the war. Electro Precizia carried out general repairs for large electrical concerns and turns out electric installations and signaling equipment for airfields and railways.
